TEASING BRUSH
Natural bristles grab even the tiniest hairs, making it the best option for teasing fine strands.

FOKSANDA ILINCIC

After seasons of sporty-chic wet hair, strands with a little oomph are blowing up the runways. Drawing inspiration from Brigitte Bardot, the grande dame of va-va-voom, the style is a throwback to the heyday of bouffants and beehives. Our favourite take, however, is far from a French twist rolled up to heaven. Whether worn down, as seen at Nina Ricci AW14-15, or pulled into a ponytail like the models at Valentino from the same season, all you need to embrace your inner debutante is a little guts at the crown. Hair master Guido Palau, who backcombed strands at Nina Ricci, calls the lift "delicate and beautiful". Just remember to prep hair with a gritty volumiser and smooth any teasing-induced texture for a pretty, ladylike finish. □

UP AND AWAY DON'T BE AFRAID TO TAKE HAIR TO NEW HEIGHTS, SAYS HAIRSTYLIST RACHAEL BROOK

PREP damp strands by spritzing in a volumiser, then blow-drying.

TEASE hair gently using a fine-tooth or teasing comb. Focus on creating lift at the crown.

BRUSH hair backwards, smoothing it out, then gather into a ponytail.

SECURE with an elastic and wrap a section of hair around the ponytail to disguise the hair tie.
